

Mustertext

Writing a story

Eine Geschichte schreiben

Wenn du eine Geschichte schreiben sollst, erhältst du meistens eine Vorgabe. Das kann ein Bild sein oder ein Satz, der am Anfang, in der Mitte oder am Ende der Geschichte vorkommen soll.

In diesem Beispiel ist der Anfang vorgegeben:

Magic for sale

It was evening and there were no cars or people on the street. I ran until I came to a big, old building, which looked dark and dirty. The sign said, 'Magic bought and sold here.' I pushed the door open.

So könnte die Geschichte fortgesetzt werden:

"Good evening, young lady," said the old man behind the desk. He spoke very slowly and looked at me closely. I knew he was thinking, 'What has she got for me?'

"Buying or selling?" he asked curiously.

"Er ... selling... I think." My voice sounded less nervous than I was. My father would go crazy if he knew I was here, talking to a man who could take some of my magic skills, put them into a bottle and sell them to a stranger. But we needed money and this was the only way to get some fast. I hated this place, hated this man, but he had what I needed, and I had what he wanted.

"Show me what you've got for me then," he said.

Although I was really scared, I took a deep breath and showed him my hands. His eyes suddenly looked round and shocked. "I can't believe it," he said. ...

← Überschrift

← Zeit

← Erzähler, Ort

← Figuren

← besondere

Fähigkeit

← Handlung
vorantreiben

Die unterstrichenen Wörter kannst du auch in deiner Geschichte verwenden, um die Geschichte auszuschmücken und spannend zu machen. Mehr solche Adjektive findest du in der Datei Wortfelder.